

Summary of Economic Impact of General Aviation in New Jersey

According to the 2016 New Jersey Statewide Economic Impacts, general aviation airports in New Jersey support an economic impact of more than $2.8 billion.

Map data © 2023 Google

Teterboro Airport in Bergen County, NJ, is the oldest operating airport in the New York City Area and the second busiest general aviation airport in the region. The airport supports more than 4,900 jobs with an annual payroll of over $352 million. Teterboro airport generates over $1.1 billion in economic impact.

According to a study by Deloitte, the AAM sector in New Jersey is projected to create more than 25,000 jobs and generate $152 million in annual state tax revenue throughout the next 15 years.

AVIATION BY THE NUMBERS

According to the New Jersey Department of Transportation's Division of Aeronautics, New Jersey has 37 general aviation airports. According to the FAA, those airports serve 10,023 pilots and 2,643 registered aircraft.

NUMBERS OF JOBS

According to the 2016 New Jersey Statewide Economic Impacts, general aviation airports support more than 12,000 jobs in the state, with an annual payroll of over $890 million.

ECONOMIC IMPACT

According to the same study, general aviation airports in New Jersey contribute more than $2.8 billion to the state's economy.

FAA data shows that the state is home to 57 repair stations, 8 FAA-approved pilot schools, 3,810 student pilots and 1,688 flight instructors.

In addition, there are 35 fixed-base operators in the state, according to the AC-U-KWIK directory. According to the New Jersey Department of Transportation's Division of Aeronautics, there are 251 heliports in New Jersey.

According to the University Aviation Association and the National Center for Education Statistics, flight departments and aviation programs in New Jersey include Mercer County Community College in Trenton, Atlantic Cape Community College in Mays Landing, Thomas Edison State University in Trenton, and County College of Morris in Randolph.